

California Technology Leadership Program

Applications Open

Be an agent of change and innovation

The most important part of civic technology is people. We invite State of California employees to a 12-month fellowship program within the Department of Technology to improve the way our government builds, designs, and delivers services for the public.

We seek technologists from State of California departments who are passionate about solving complex challenges across technology, processes, and government agencies. Working together as a cohort of State employees, fellows will drive digital innovation initiatives to improve services for California residents and internal government IT.

- You'll receive training on topics including tech procurement, agile software development, and user-centered design.
- You'll have the opportunity to lead a tech project from start to finish in 12 months.
- Along the way, you'll also have built-in opportunities for professional and personal development through leadership seminars, private lunch-and-learns, public speaking training, and more.
